Farrar, The Life of Christ (1964), 311]. Only when with wavering faith he removed his glance from the _____ to look at the furious waves and the black gulf beneath him, only then did he begin to sink. . . . It is my firm belief that if as individual people, as families, communities, and nations, we could, like Peter, fix our eyes on _____, we too might walk triumphantly over the swelling waves of disbelief and remain untterrified amid the rising winds of doubt. But if we turn away our eyes from him in whom we must believe, as it is so easy to do and the world is so much tempted to do, if we look to the power and fury of those terrible and destructive elements around us rather than to him who can help and save us, then we shall inevitably sink in a sea of conflict and sorrow and despair.” [Ensign, Nov. 1992, p. 19]
